Dear Hiroshi,

I hope you're doing well.

I just received some urgent feedback from the Journal of Educational Technology regarding our 'Medicinal Chemistry: A Novel Approach' paper that requires our immediate attention. It appears there's a critical query from a post-publication reviewer that necessitates an immediate clarification or minor erratum, specifically concerning some of the core experimental parameters we detailed.

Given your upcoming presentation at the International Symposium on Fundamental Forces next month, it's absolutely crucial that we address this without delay. We certainly don't want any lingering questions about our published work, especially with your significant new $2M grant from the Climate Research Fund focusing so heavily on medicinal chemistry.

I've already made the necessary revisions based on their comments and highlighted them for your quick review. Please find them in the attached file: **manuscript_updates.docx****.

Could you please open it and review my proposed changes as soon as you possibly can? The journal is pressing for our response by the end of day tomorrow, so your swift input is vital. Let's touch base immediately after you've had a look.

Best regards,

Laura Brown
