Dear Hiroshi,

Hope you're having a productive week.

I'm writing regarding our 'Explainable AI: A Novel Approach' manuscript. The International Literature Festival Review just sent back some highly unexpected (and rather critical) feedback that requires immediate attention. It seems they have a very tight turnaround window for these revisions, specifically concerning some of the methodology explanations and how they align with the broader implications – which, frankly, could impact our future reporting for the Chemical Innovation Fund grant if not addressed perfectly and promptly.

I've been working on incorporating my suggested edits and consolidating Grace's final checks into the attached document. Could you please review the "manuscript_updates.docx" immediately? I've highlighted my proposed changes, and we urgently need your final approval/input by end of day today (or very early tomorrow morning at the absolute latest) so I can send it back to the editors.

Given your busy schedule with the new grant and the upcoming Cultural Anthropology Festival, I wanted to get this crucial step finalized as quickly as possible.

Thanks so much for your prompt attention to this.

Best,

Victoria Chen Professor, Future Learning University
