Dear Alex,

I hope this finds you well and that the new $5M cognitive neuroscience grant from the Climate Research Fund is off to a brilliant start – truly fantastic news!

I'm writing regarding our 'Neurodegeneration: A Novel Approach' paper. We've just received a very urgent request from the editor at *Astrophysical Journal* for immediate final revisions. They've highlighted a few crucial points that need to be addressed today to ensure we meet their tight deadline for acceptance. Given your recent insights on relevant policies, I think you'll find their feedback on the implications section particularly pertinent.

I've incorporated all the necessary changes, along with some refined data points, into the attached document: "manuscript_updates.docx". Could you please review it as an absolute priority? We need to submit this back to them by close of business tomorrow. Your immediate feedback on the revised methodology and concluding remarks is essential before we send it off.

I know you're incredibly busy, especially with your upcoming presentation at Advanced Materials Letters next quarter, but this truly can't wait.

Thanks so much for your prompt attention to this.

Best regards,

Kenji
